The Imagine Tomorrow competition challenges 9th to 12th graders to tackle the world's energy issues with fresh, well-researched ideas. It gives classroom lessons real-world meaning.

Compete for $100,000+ in cash prizes

Students vie for big cash awards, including many for first-time participating schools. Last year, first-timers took home top prizes.

Show students new possibilities

Imagine Tomorrow shows students the power of their own ideas. It unites them with their community to create positive change.

Fuel interest in all subjects

One educator noted that his students “used their English, writing, reading, math, art, science, politics, speech, drama, and technology—and gained a real sense of why they learn these things in school.”

Register March 1

Compete May 17–19, 2013. Registration is free. Housing and dining at the event are free, too.
