Eisenhower Middle School students celebrate Martin Luther King, Jr.

EMS students wrapped their enthusiasm for Rubik's Cube into annual MLK celebration

Each year in January, students in schools across the country remember the contributions of Martin Luther King, Jr. with celebrations and tributes.

This year Eisenhower Middle School students' tribute included a portrait of the leader in Rubik's Cube form. Their tribute incorporated more than 200 Rubik's Cube pieces and took eight club members almost two hours to create.

Combining their appreciation for the legacy of King with the Rubik's Cube was no coincidence. On Saturday, Jan. 31, Eisenhower Middle School hosts a Rubik's Cube contest open to elementary, middle and high school students. If you have not registered, you can still do so by emailing Mr. Wayne Thomasson at wthomasson@everettsd.org. Or you can come watch the action at the school from 9 – 11:30 a.m.
