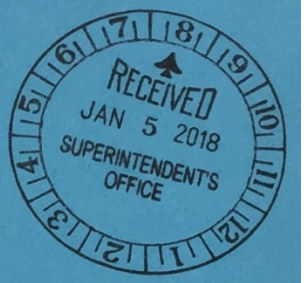
I liked your e-mail! You put emotion into words! So many verbs and adjectives. If that was an e-mail your essays must be really long!

You did amazing at describing your verbs and your structure was great too. You have such a talent at writing it amazes me on how your not an author.

-Grace Hampson



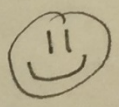
Dr. Cohn — Chase Halverson

Your email was great and full of exuberance, I could not have ever expected a better written email. I swore I was reading a Poet's story. Phenomanal!!

Good job using strong — Rylie Atkinson

Vivid verbs! I also love the metaphor about the blanket of snow. You brought all the teacher's moods up, esspecially mine!

-great work



Lucy La Chance 1/4/18

I like how you used a lot of vived verbs and adjectives. It makes the reader pay attention to all the little details. Im amazed your not an author.

Love the enthusiasm and want to write just like you someday.

from: Ashton F.
TO: Mr. Cohn

Dear Dr. Cohn,

I must say that your e-mail to all the teachers was full of wonderful things, including the ending. Here are some things that I like. The entry, "On this chilly January morning!" The body, "Not all of us were here over the holiday break, many of us awake on Dec. 25th to a beautiful, unbroken blanket of snow frosting deck railings, tree limbs, yards and streets." "It wasn't long before that blank white slate told the day's stories of snowman...

The way you explained it was very heartwarming.

Very unique and inteligent vocabulary. Also very descriptive information on an email.

Dear Dr. Cohn,
Mrs. Lawson has shown us your magnificent email to her on the Second of January. All I must say is that your punctuation is superb and your word usage is outstanding. I do enjoy that you manage to fit a quote somwhere in your e-mail as well.

warm regards: one of Mrs Lawsons students

Taylor Prenfro

This email has amazing details and is very decriptive. It is very interesting and very good. The details stood out to really in paragraph one. Also good vocabulary

Tyson Mikulecky

Dear Mr. Cohn.
I loved your email. It sounds like a beautiful winter story. My favorite part of your email is the part when you said "I'm a great fan of Snow when school is not in session!" You did amazing.

Sincerly,
Nicole

Samuel Hershberger

I like how you said welcome back on this chilly January morning. Instead of just welcome back on this January morning

You did awesome at describing the scenery on the 25th as well as large vocabulary to back up scenery. Great work!

- Gabe

Beachy

Dear Doctor Cohn,

Miles Martinez
Period 1-2
Lawson

I liked how you used your own comentary when you talked about Show.

I also liked how you used strong vivid verbs like →

I thought your email was Amazing! I loved how you talked about the Snow on Christmas day. I also liked how you talked about the Students who won awards. I thought that was pretty cool.

-Arthur Shurtleff 6th grade G.M.S

Isabella Sabatini

comment: I like how he starts and describes things like "a chilly January morning" and "a Perfect unbroken blanket of Show." One funny thing I noticed was, I am a huge fan of Snow (when school is not in session)!

Timothy Mesheryakov

I love how you describe everthing and how you give edvice you are great writer.

I give you a A+ because...

I loved your use of words and how you discribed the Snow on december 25th.

-LONDON R.

Sam A. Anderson

- Love the metaphor of, "to a beautiful, unbroken sheet of Snow."
- Love the insiring words, "The tracks were laid, then gone but memories still remain

I like how he quoted from a famous person and how he described a lot of things.

Tiana P

I really like the start. very descriptive words made it very strong. It made me a clear visual. And it had good flow.

-Sean Bang

I love that you described the snow and that we have a fresh start, on the new year.

- What I liked about this email was it was a very polite Mannerd paragraph. Everything that was phrased was extremley nice. ^^

Savannah 23 S.