

EVERETT

Public Schools

Seeks a Superintendent of Schools

for an exemplary school district

One half hour north of downtown Seattle

One hour south of U.S. Canadian border

Application materials due Jan. 22, 2009

Everett Public Schools' staff are passionate about doing the world's most important work – ensuring that each student learns to high standards and graduates on time. Our schools are high-powered learning centers that engage 18,700 culturally-rich students who speak 50 different languages from every corner of the world. Staff and students are encouraged and supported to be life-long learners and community leaders.

A community that supports its schools

The district encompasses the cities of Everett and Mill Creek and large swaths of rural and suburban unincorporated Snohomish County. Voters historically support school finance issues as evidenced by school buildings that are modern or completely modernized on a well-planned, 40-year cycle. Citizens volunteer by the thousands in classrooms and schools, and businesses and service organizations are invaluable education partners. More than 750 individuals and over 100 businesses support the Everett Public Schools Foundation in a variety of ways, including an annual spring breakfast that earns $85,000 each year.

Historic beginnings, strong future, scenic outlook

Residents enjoy the richness of Everett's historic roots and the growth of the Mill Creek community as a relatively new suburban enclave. Nestled between Puget Sound and the Cascade Mountains, the region is graced with a diverse concentration of breathtaking scenery, yearlong activities and unique attractions. Recreation abounds here — on land, on sea, and in the air. Opportunities for cultural richness, broad economic diversification and higher education are plentiful. Everett is the county seat and a highly-recognized medical center. A number of aerospace and high-tech corporations and the U.S. Navy call Everett and its vicinities home. A future University of Washington satellite campus is anticipated and will augment Everett Community College as a post-high school learning option for students wanting to continue living, working and learning in this area.

Join the team in Everett, where we work well, live well,
grow and learn well together.