

Summer Reading Activities

	Fifth Grade – Activity #4
Title	Vocabulary
Parent Information	Building vocabulary is a critical component to becoming an effective communicator and skilled reader. Vocabulary is learned through speaking, listening, reading, and writing. As fifth grade readers advance with phonics and fluency, they will most likely experience new or unfamiliar vocabulary words. Taking the time to explore these words will support building knowledge and reading comprehension. Words often fall in 3 categories. <ol style="list-style-type: none">1. Words used in everyday speech (ex. animal, street, happy).2. Generalized words that often appear in text (ex. theme, inference).3. Content specific or academic words (ex. consumer, photosynthesis). When focusing on vocabulary with your child it is important to go beyond the dictionary definition. Help your child make connections with possible synonyms, antonyms, parts of speech, comparisons, real-life examples, and/or visual representations. It is also important to review, use, and practice words once they have been introduced. While reading, encourage your child to note new or unfamiliar vocabulary words in their Reading Response Journal. Use those words with the suggested activities below.
