Course: Interpersonal Relationships Exploratory: Preparatory:
COMPONENTS AND COMPETENCIES

Performance Assessments:

- After completing communication skill and personal characteristic inventories and by using the FCCLA planning process, students will set a personal goal regarding their own communication skills and an interpersonal relationship. In the Follow Up section of the planning process students will reflect on how their individual personal needs, characteristics, and use of communication technologies, impacted their ability to reach their set goal. Students will share their goals with at least one other person and evaluate their self-reflection. The evaluation should include answers to the following questions: Was self-advocacy demonstrated through the goal process? Did they use the resources available to them to reach their goal? From reading their goal setting and planning process forms, what can be interpreted about that person's communication skills and the effect of those skills on relationships?

- Ethical behavior on the job improves employer-employee relationships.
- Listening and understanding improves relationships with friends, family, co-workers, employers and community members.

Performance Assessments: Part 1 uses the Social Studies – Causes of Conflict Classroom-Based Assessment.

- The student researches a recent historical group conflict (Examples are Kent State, clashes experiences by Freedom Riders, Cuban Missile Crises) and provides a plausible argument for why one factor or factors played the biggest role in causing the conflict with three or more reasons explicitly supported by evidence of each factor discussed.
- Social Studies and FACSE Bridging Activities: Students will examine and reflect upon the communication styles used throughout the conflict. Students will evaluate how conflict resolution skills negatively or positively impacted the conflict. Students will create role play situation in which they recreate a relevant scene regarding the conflict in which they demonstrate positive/effective communication skills. They will identify current community resources that if they had been with a difference in communication styles and attitudes.
- Part 2 uses the FCCLA program Power of One:
 - A Better You
 - · Family Ties or
 - Working on Working
- Based on what students have learned about their own communication skills and a variety of conflict prevention and management techniques, individual students will set goals and take action to improve communication in their individual lives, specific to an issue of conflict. This could be in the family, the community or the workplace and the student might be making recommendation to someone else.

Relevance to Work:

• Understanding patterns and causes of conflict and related communication in families, the workplace, and communities allows individuals to analyze and determine changes needed.

Performance Assessments:

• Working in teams, students will research factors of healthy relationships and what constitutes an unhealthy relationship, in a family, workplace or community. In teams students will compare and constrate the two types of relationships. Using the information from research, students will choose a factor contributing to a similar unhealthy relationship. After choosing an unhealthy relationship factor, students will research an appropriate healthy process for handling the factor. In the research process, students will also find five suggestions for handling stress in groups.

• Students will compare and contrast researched strategies in a class discussion format and determine which strategies they will advocate be used in school or local situations.

Relevance to Work:

- Being able to identify healthy and unhealthy factors in relationships is a first step to relationship building and improvement.
- This applies to families, the workplace and communities.

Performance Assessments:

- Part 1: To research community need for a service learning project students will use the Social Studies Humans and the Environment Classroom-Based Assessment format:
- Students will provide accurate analysis of explicitly states positive benefits and/or negative consequences of three (or more) stakeholders' uses of the physical environment (for example the park systems or safety along roadways) by using data on marriage, family structure, family life cycles, families in crisis and preparing for parenthood; Students will present an interactive workshop for families and/or classmates which proposes a reasonable solution to the (environmental) issue in terms of improving the health of the system with three or more reasons supported by accurate evidence.
- Planning and Assessment Tool: Social Studies Humans and the Environment Classroom—Based Assessment.
- Part 2: After researching community needs (during the Social Studies CBA activity), student teams will plan, facilitate and complete a service learning project. During the above process students may have found community needs related to the conditions of families, other than effect on the physical environment, that they wish to address. For purposes of this part of the assessment these activities may also be appropriate. The goal of the project will be to improve relationships and management of multiple roles through better communication.

- Students will develop guidelines for assessing relationships pertinent to the project and will demonstrate these standards throughout the project.
- Students will identify the related careers in which this type of activity would be a professional responsibility.
